

Three United States Presidents Died on July 4

The historic fact relating to July 4, is that three of our nation's presidents died on the anniversary of Independence Day, we are informed by the Division of Information and Publication of the United States Department of the Interior.

George Washington Bicentennial Committee. This is especially strange because the date is so significant. The three presidents who died on July 4 were John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and James Monroe. Each of these three early presidents played a prominent part in the formation of our government, and each received, as a reward from the people, the highest office. Having devoted great labors in planning the formation of our government, it fell to them to set noble examples in putting their own lives into the service of the people.

These three presidents were John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and James Monroe. Adams died at 84, Jefferson at 83, and Monroe at 73. Adams died at 84, Jefferson at 83, and Monroe at 73. Adams died at 84, Jefferson at 83, and Monroe at 73.

Mill Finished Season's Run

Monday evening of last week, shortly after supper, Ophelia Varney came along with her new Ford, took in Lionel, Jerry and Irving Bartlett for a joy ride. The route selected was the old road, through to Dickvale, past the sulphur spring where they stopped for a fresh drink, then they journeyed on up the back way to Concord Pond. Here they stopped in the car and looked at a handsome deer for fifteen minutes, feeding in an old orchard. From there they turned off at the old Andrews place and up over the granite ledge down through Redding to Labrador Pond, and home.

Two tickled kids were Grace and Gertrude Bartlett when, a few days ago, each received a handsome post card from their teacher, Miss Sadie Redding, who is touring for two months, far away. The cards were posted June 22, at Flagstaff, Arizona. Upon Grace's card there is a handsome scene of ancient fallen Monarchs, Petrified Forest Arizona, and on Gertrude's a picture of an Apache Indian and her papoose, as they dress and appear in their native land.

Graveyard television says: "Walter L. Sanborn, editor and manager of the North Penn Reporter of Lansdale, Pa., on his recent visit to Bowdoin College commencement lost a pocket book containing about one hundred dollars."

It does seem possible that an editor would have so large a sum of money about him! Wasn't it that Mrs. Sanborn's pocket book that was lost?

Thermometer thieves are logging off the mercury in Norway. Saturday night, a large thermometer at the Norway Auto Co. was torn from the outside doorway and appropriated. An elevator opening in the sidewalk receives all goods for the store.

Freeland Howe, fisherman and music dealer, hands us a bit of good advice which we gladly pass along. Following instructions will go a long way to preserve good sport and catch big lakes and streams. Here is the clipping:

"Millions of small fish can be saved this summer by wetting the hands before taking them off the hook and putting them gently back into the water, officials of the American Game Association announce. Dry hands disturb the protective film of the fish, causing fungi to attach to the injured places. This fungi eventually kills the fish, experts declare. Whereby if the hands are wet, the film is not disturbed and the little fish are not permanently injured if gently handled. These grow up and afford the angler future pleasure and food that otherwise would be lost."

The HEALTHIEST

will profit most

JULY 4TH has been a turning point in the history of this country since Independence Day of 1776. The Civil War turned at Gettysburg, July 1-3, 1863. The Spanish War turned at Santiago, July 3, 1898. The last big depression drew to a close in July and ended in August, 1921. Good times begin in the Fall.

Are you getting ready?

Use the July 4th week-end as an investment in health. Make it a turning point in your courage. Take the youngsters with you and lunch under the trees. Breathe deep the fresh, clear air; look confidently to the future.

The past is behind us—leave it there. Remember, it will be true—as it always has been—the healthiest will profit most.

Here's to the up-turn. Come on!

Attractions at Wyman Dam

New Road—New Lake Formed—Electric Plants at Work

As solidly implanted as though it were a natural part of the countryside, Wyman Dam with its artificial barrier halting the waters of the Kennebec River temporarily to give up its supply of kilowatt hours, has artistically transformed this section of Somerset County into one of the most attractive spots in the State.

What was formerly a small river bottled in on either side at this point by jagged mountains, is now a placid lake nearly three-quarters of a mile wide and 12 miles long, extending northward to Caratunk Village.

The twelve mile drive along the new federal highway on the east shore of Wyman Lake is proving to be of unusual interest to all, as it affords not only a comprehensive view of the entire development, but many spots of scenic beauty from which the lake in its exceptionally rugged and natural setting, may be viewed.

A new highway has been built from the village of Bingham up to the site of the dam and is continued for 12 miles farther through deep cuts and over high hills along the side toward the Forks and Jackson.

Vivid Contrast With That of Three Years Ago

*One seeing Wyman Dam today cannot help contrasting it with its appearance at three years ago—roads that were not particularly good, to say the least, a countryside that was nothing but a continuation of the vista seen for miles along the river—no dam filling the valley with its fertile green embankment extending from the foot of Baker Mountain nearly 2300 feet westward.

Erection of dams spoil beautiful scenery? Not! Everywhere about the dam is evidence that there has been nothing but an improvement in its appearance.

Of course there remains considerable grading of the grounds to be done, but even now a transformation for the better is seen in the start which has been made toward landscaping, and when the marks left by the construction work have been erased, Wyman Dam will be one of the most beautiful spots in Maine.

A good-sized force is at work putting the finishing touches on the job. This consists of building a concrete parapet wall and elevator pent house on top of the intake, constructing the main entrance tower, grading yards, graveling, grading and toping the earth dam, as well as putting the finished surface on the ornamental power house pilasters.

The construction office forces have been combined, and now are pleasantly located in the building formerly used as a recreation hall in connection with the commissary, it being necessary to dispose of the buildings formerly used, so that the landscaping of the adjacent areas might be completed.

Two Generators Installed

Two of the three generators which will ultimately be used in the power house are now installed and in use daily. Each unit has a capacity of 34,000 horsepower. To get a true conception of the size of the dam, one must climb to the top. Here everything looks different—comparative sizes are changed. Looking down from the operating bridge into the spillway channel, one sees a giant sheet of water rushing under the raised gate. To break up a log jam that may have formed down in the river below the dam, an operator has only to temporarily raise one of the large crest gates. The size and velocity of the sheet of water is increased magically, its force striking the jam and breaking it aside as though it were nothing but straw.

Above the dam is a crew of log drivers forcing the mass of pulp wood down to the log sluice entrance. In the driving of logs the new tug boat, "The Kennebec," plays an important part, by bringing the wood down from the head of the lake and then by weaving in and out, forcing it nearer and nearer the log sluice opening.

Interior of Power House Very Attractive

The inside of the power house is practically completed, and is most attractive. Everything is spic-and-span and the operators aim to keep it that way. In the center of the control room is the operators' desk and directly in front of the desk of this room is the large switchboard with its red and green lights.

Wyman Dam is largely an earth fill structure with a concrete crest, 2000 feet long and more than 135 feet high. It impounds two billion cubic feet of water. Upstream of this great reservoir is the headwater of the Kennebec which affords a natural water storage of 32 billion cubic feet. This great water storage assures constant power and also regulates the flow of the river so that the efficiency of older hydro-electric plants on the lower river is substantially increased.

Wyman Dam was constructed largely of Maine materials, and almost exclusively by native labor. It is one of the largest hydro-electric plants in the eastern part of the United States.

BATES—WEST PARIS

Grange Memorial Service—Mrs. Berry Gone to Ohio. Mrs. Andrews Dead—Anniversary a Success.

Geraldine Williams has returned home from her first year in Weston College, Ill., accompanied by her mother, Mrs. M. E. Williams, who went out a few weeks before.

Several went to Trap Corner last Friday night to attend a wedding shower to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Berry (nee Madeline Emery).

The next regular meeting of the Grange, July 11th, will be a memorial service and a dozen or more of the early Past Masters' pictures will be unveiled in their places on the walls of the auditorium, with due honors to the first workers of West Paris Grange, No. 208.

Mabel Ricker has been visiting friends in Rumford.

Mrs. E. R. Berry has gone on a trip to Cleveland, Ohio, with a nephew from Andover to visit her son, Seth Marston, and family.

The funeral of Mrs. Jennie Andrews, who died Sunday evening, was held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mabel Mann, Tuesday, at 2 p. m. Rev. A. E. Roberts and Rev. Eleanor B. Forbes officiated. Mrs. Andrews has been in failing health for some time. She has made her home here with her daughter for several years, both of them spending considerable time in Bryant Pond during the summer.

Mrs. Andrews was born in Woodstock, New Brunswick, May 21, 1839, and married R. T. Allen of Milton, where they lived. Four children were born to them: two sons, Mark Allen of Bryant Pond and Fred Allen of Cambridge, Mass. One daughter died when young and the other is Mrs. Mann, already mentioned.

Besides these there are four grandchildren, Dr. Mason Allen of Portland, Park Allen of Bryant Pond, Philip Allen of Cambridge, Mass. and Mrs. Doris Allen Roberts, also of Cambridge. She also leaves one sister in New Brunswick and one sister-in-law. There were beautiful flowers. Interment will be in South Paris beside her second husband, Edwin Andrews.

Three new sign boards have been put up for the United Parish church: one on the Baptist church on Church street, one in the yard in front of the M. E. Chapel on Main street and one on the corner of Main and Church streets, to direct to the large church on Church street, where the Sunday morning services are held.

Next Sunday, July 5, will be Rev. A. E. Roberts' last Sunday before his vacation. He will have three weeks or the rest of the month of July.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the Universalist church last Saturday and Sunday was a great success.
